Welcome to Module Eight

Posted Oct 20, 2025 6:00 AM

Congratulations, you've made it to the final module of the course!

This week, you'll bring everything together by reflecting on your learning, exploring how Scrum scales in large organizations, and finalizing your professional portfolio. This is your opportunity to connect what you've learned to real-world practice and showcase your growth as a computer science professional.

Assignments This Week

1. Discussion: Scaling Scrum

In this discussion, you'll take a deeper look at Scrum at the enterprise level. The Module Eight resources introduce several frameworks for scaling agile practices, including Scrum@Scale, SAFe, LeSS, and Nexus.

Reflect on what you've learned throughout the course and discuss:

- Which scaling approach do you believe would work best in a real-world organization?

- Why does that framework appeal to you based on its structure, flexibility, or implementation strategy?

Your insights will help connect agile principles to complex, large-scale environments.

Journal: Portfolio Submission

This final journal is your chance to complete and submit your professional portfolio.

You should have already added your instructor as a collaborator on your GitHub repository in the previous module. Please make sure that you've accepted the invitation or reach out if you haven't received it yet.

Grading Note:
This journal is pass/fail. Students who thoughtfully respond to all questions will receive full credit, even if their project files are missing. However, please be sure to upload your files so your portfolio remains complete and ready for professional use.

These reflective "essential questions" are designed to help you synthesize your experiences across multiple courses and consider your personal journey as a computer scientist. There are no right or wrong answers only your authentic reflections and connections.

Looking Ahead

This final week is about reflection, integration, and celebration of your achievements. Take pride in your work and think about how the skills you've gained will support your future studies and career.

You've come a long way let's finish strong! 💪
